DUTY AND SUPPORT

Helena Rauduvinich

"We are fellow workers with God."

First letter of Paul to the Church at Corinth (Corinthians -3:9)

The duty is the force that keeps us firm and determined; Deviate from it, and weaken our moral qualifications. For that reason, we must be loyal to the obligations assumed towards the experiences and lessons of life.

The Spiritist harvest calls us to serve and collaborate effectively in building the Kingdom of God on Earth. In accomplishing our obligations, and developing our tasks, that we will progress.

God assigns unique and untransferable tasks that always represent the best applications to us. It is our duty to dignify life, help our fellow man and build on the work of the good. Despite the fact that our mission does not appear in the eyes of others, it is quite important for life and for us, indeed. Many believe that they are incapable of performing noble services because they feel poor and incompetent. Others consider themselves incapable, claiming to be sinful and bad, forgetting that the debtor and the ignorant need to work for their own spiritual improvement. The Father expects our cooperation in the expansion of the good. He always extends His arms to us for daily service.

Although the condition of men is humble, the duty ennoble their lives, clarifies the reason, and strengthens their souls. The fulfillment of duty brings inner calmness, serenity of spirit, and firms peace of conscience towards the storms of life. Superior Spirits have rooted within themselves, a sense of duty. In the book "After Death" Léon Denis, warns us that the duty inspires us to sacrifice, dedicate, and to be enthusiastic. He points out the steps for evolution. Therefore, the duty is an important ally of the men in their desire to transform themselves, to carry out their inner reform.

Let us not wait a foreign gratitude to help. Even those who have the flinty heart in the shadow of evil, deserve our help, our prayer, our vibration. If for some reason we cannot approach them, let's support them indirectly. We can always work to reduce the despair and distress that still reigns on earth. Let us love the duty that life has reserved us. In God's eyes the whole burden is worthy of appreciation. Let us remember that 'the worm's effort in the land fertilization has important significance for both.' Every worker is called to the majestic renewal. Humanity is full of anonymous laborers who follow serving in silence. "In generous Father workshop, each apprentice is called to Christian service."
